In prior coordination for the Woodrow Wilson Bridge project, MHT and SHA agreed that the Bulter House is eligible for the National Register (August 28, 1989). The two-story, three-bay wood-framed house is eligible under Criterion A as a rare example of an antebellum farm in Prince George's County owned by free-blacks. It represents the progress of a free-black family in the mid-nineteenth century. Henry Alexander Butler purchased the property in 1853 and it continues to be owned by his descendants.

STATE HISTORIC SITES INVENTORY FORM Addendum of Boundary Confirmation

RESOURCE NAME: Butler House at Mount Welby
SURVEY NO.: PG:76A-14
ADDRESS: Oxon Hill Road, Oxon Hill vicinity, Prince George's County, Maryland

Boundary Justification:

The National Register boundary for the Butler House at Mount Welby was drawn to encompass all the land still owned by the Butler family, descendants of the free African-American settlers who moved to the property around 1853. The boundary includes the circa 1850 Butler House as well as an adjacent circa 1940 brick house. Most of the land is now heavily wooded; only a small area remains clear around the buildings.

Verbal Description:

The boundary for the Butler House at Mount Welby is defined as the following tax parcels on Prince George's County Tax Map 95: 26, 27, and 32 through 37. The boundary encompasses approximately 27.5 acres. It is bounded on the north by the Forest Heights municipal boundary, on the east by adjacent tax parcels, and on the south and west by Mount Welby/Oxon Hill Children's Farm.

This substantial, two story frame house was once the nucleus of a farmstead owned and operated by a family of antebellum free Negroes. It is still in possession of that family. It consisted of a three bay, one room down, one room up main block with a one and a half story kitchen attached to the gable end. This is a plan common to homes of landowning families of the mid 19th century. Since that time, further additions have been made.

This substantial house was once the nucleus of a farmstead owned and operated by a family of antebellum free Negroes. It is still in the possession of the descendants of that family. The house faces west, toward an abandoned road that was once the main route to Washington, D.C. through Prince George's County in the 19th and early 20th centuries. Behind the house stood the chicken house, meat house, barns, and other buildings essential to farm life. None of these remain. The house itself is a two story, frame structure with a steep gable roof. Its principal facade consists of three bays with the front door located in the southermost bay near the gable end. The main block is one bay deep. Attached to the northern gable end is a one and a half story shed kitchen. Between the kitchen and the main block ascends a tall brick chimney covered with cement. The house was originally sheathed with overlapping weatherboards, according to the present occupant and owner, William Butler, and is now protected by permastone siding.

The interior of the main block is composed of one large room. Any indication of a partitioned side hallway between the front and rear doors has been masked by modern improvements, as have most of the original features of the house. The second floor consists of two rooms in the main block and a small chamber above the kitchen.

A screen porch has been added to the rear (east) of the house, and a small shed to the kitchen.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

According to William Butler, this house was begun in 1851 and was intended to be a post office. In 1853 his grandfather, a free Negro from Charles County, purchased the building and land around it, moved his family here, and completed construction of the house. Among the papers cherished by Butler are the tax receipts of his grandfather showing the taxes that he paid on the property in the 1859, 1860, and in several other years in the 1860's. According to Butler, his grandfather was a friend of Federal officers who visited the house during their trips to and from Virginia during the Civil War. The family has passed down several interesting stories relating to these visits.

The daughters of Henry Butler, ~~Henry~~, Henry Butler himself, and their relatives and friends after the Civil War can be seen in the photographs of the last quarter of the 19th century that are kept in a photoalbum of that period. These photographs, still in the possession of the Butlers, reveal the culture, status, aspirations, and personalities of this family during the Victorian era in America. Some of them have been copied as part of this survey; others were not.

The history of this house, the oral informants associated with it, and its primary photographic and documentary resources make this site the only one of its kind known to still exist in southern Maryland.
